Whereas violence against women refers to any act or conduct, based on gender, that causes death or physical, sexual, or psychological harm or suffering to women;

Whereas violence against women is an offense against human dignity and a manifestation of the historically unequal power relations between women and men;

Whereas violence against women pervades every sector of society regardless of class, race, ethnic group, income, culture, level of education,

Whereas elimination of violence against women is essential to ensure the full and equal participation of women in society;

Whereas adoption of the Convention within the framework of the Organization of American States is a positive contribution in protecting the rights of women and eliminating violence against them; and

Whereas by ratifying and acceding to the Convention the United States will become a more credible proponent of the rights of women and a more effective advocate in encouraging other countries to protect the human rights and fundamental freedoms of women: Now, therefore, be it
